Wheat Pennies

Wheat pennies, minted from 1909 to 1958, are a beloved piece of American numismatic history. These one-cent coins, featuring two stalks of wheat on the reverse and Abraham Lincoln on the obverse, were the first to bear the image of a U.S. president. While most wheat pennies are worth only a few cents, certain key dates and errors can be quite valuable. For instance, the 1909-S VDB is highly sought after by collectors, and error coins like the 1958 Double Die Obverse can fetch significant sums. Although they're no longer in circulation as currency, wheat pennies hold historical and collectible value, making them a cherished item for numismatists and enthusiasts alike.
